
down together as a family we discuss our plans. This is one of the most important things we do. It gives you a chance to think through each task ahead of time. This way when they are doing their planning they have a direction, and it gives you time to think it through. It also helps if you can make a real plan for the day (just pick a point in time to have a sit down family meeting to discuss and decide things). I will post a few links below that will help. You will be busy, so don't try to do too much. With two small children you have to make choices and decide what you will do each day. So, it is all good, but you will be busy. Remember the things that brought you the most joy when you were younger, and be mindful of those things now. It is amazing how life takes you in new directions, and the things that made you happy the most become less so. As you look back it is easy to notice how much more you appreciate the simple things you enjoyed as a child. When I was growing up I remember the Christmas program at church, the tree, the lighted Advent wreath, the lights on the house, decorating the house, and more. So be mindful of those things, and let them spark you in the direction that will bring the most joy to you as an adult. Keep all the traditions. Make it a point 4bc0debe42
